

Wednes Tuesday 20th November 2018

L.O. To write a story opening using different sentence starters.

On the undulating sea, the deep, dark water was home to the small, fear-filled boats. Thousands of men, who were trembling with terror, were cascading towards the enemy. With the beaches fast approaching, there was no turning back. Despair. Despair and dread were the only things felt. Terrified, the young boy's pupil dilated. Only his raspy breath was heard. Water splashed along the side of the boat. Splish. Splash. Splish. Splash. Heavy, metal helmets, lay on the soldiers' quivering heads. Crash. The ramp landed on a Normandy beach. It had begun.

IHP

Carmen, this is a fantastic story opening. You have varied your sentences, chosen effective vocabulary and shown what a talented writer you are - well done!

